8. Main Content

The Gambling Act 2005 ("the 2005 Act") will regulate the manufacture, supply, installation, adaptation, maintenance or repair of gaming machines in Great Britain from 1st September 2007 via a licensing system. These regulations contain a restriction on the supply or installation of gaming machines which have been designed to allow money to be paid to use a machine by means of a credit card or debit card.

9. Brief Statement of Grounds

The 2005 Act aims to keep gambling crime-free, ensure gambling is fair and open and prevent harm from gambling. These regulations are necessary to deter players from gambling beyond their means, or being encouraged to gamble inappropriately. In addition to a rule prohibiting machines being used in these circumstances (see the separate notification of the Section 240 regulations), it is important also to regulate the supply chain element of machine provision. These regulations replicate the provision included in Section 245 of the Act prohibiting the supply or installation of gaming machines capable of being paid for by means of a credit card (Section 245 will be repealed).
