5. Title

Regulation annexed to the order of 23 November 1987 relating to the safety of vessels
Division 235: High-sea supply vessels and harbour craft

6. Products Concerned

The new division 235 concerns:

- All high-sea supply vessels which are mainly used for the transportation of supplies, materials and equipment to high-sea installations and which contain on the forward section superstructures housing the accommodation and the bridge, and on the aft section an open deck for the handling of cargo at sea;
- All high-sea harbour craft when the latter vessels transport in bulk limited quantities of harmful and potentially dangerous liquid substances.

7. Notification Under Another Act

8. Main Content

Division 235 sets forth the design and building regulations for high-sea supply vessels as well as the provisions applicable to high-sea harbour craft when transporting in bulk limited quantities of harmful and potentially dangerous liquid substances.

9. Brief Statement of Grounds

The purpose of the present division is to make compulsory the recommendations of the International Maritime Organisation with regards to high-sea supply vessels and high-sea harbour craft when the latter are transporting in bulk limited quantities of harmful or potentially dangerous liquid substances (Resolution A469 (XII) and Resolution A673 (16), respectively) specifying those which are left to the judgement of the Administration.

10. Reference Documents - Basic Texts

A. Directives on the design and building of high-sea supply vessels (Resolution A469 (XII));

B. Directives on the bulk transportation and handling of limited quantities of harmful and potentially dangerous liquid substances on board high-sea harbour craft (Resolution A673 (16)).

The text of these two resolutions can be obtained from the International Maritime Organisation.
