8. Main Content

The protection of the Protected Designations of Origin (PDO) and Protected Geographical Indications (PGI), whose territorial range extends to more than one Autonomous Community, compliments the community standards in the area of protection, ensures the proper functioning of the system and sufficient and accurate information to the consumer, in addition to respect for fair competition between operators.

The new precepts established by community law in the area of official inspections and those specific to PDO and PGI, combined with the many changes that the agri-food sector has experienced, justify the need for a new regulatory framework that regulates the management entities and limits their functions, separating the functions of management from those of carrying out official inspections by the competent authority. In this way MAGRAMA is established as the competent body for carrying out official inspections and its authority to delegate certain inspection tasks to independent third-parties is regulated and the foundations of collaboration between the management and inspection bodies established through an internal inspection system.

It establishes the principles of co-operation between public administrations within the scope of the PDO and PGI, whose territorial range extends to more than one Autonomous Community.

9. Brief Statement of Grounds

The establishment of a legal regime, complementary to the community regulation, applicable to the Protected Designations of Origin (PDO) and Protected Geographical Indications (PGI), whose territorial range extends to more than one Autonomous Community, with particular attention on the official inspection of marketing, applicable to products, operators and activities.
