8. Main Content

The purpose of the Decree and the Order (notification to follow) is, firstly, to make declarations compulsory for holders and owners of camelids and, secondly, to make compulsory the identification of individual camelids by fitting them with an electronic chip or two ear tags, one of which is electronic.

9. Brief Statement of Grounds

Having an overview of all camelid owners on French territory is an indispensable prerequisite for the effective implementation of measures against outbreaks of animal diseases. Knowing where animals are being held makes it possible to respond rapidly to prevent and contain animal diseases such as tuberculosis or foot-and-mouth disease, thereby limiting associated economic losses, both direct (animal deaths) and indirect (difficulties in internal EU trade). Precise counts of all camelid populations and implementation of an enduring compulsory general identification system were two recommendations made by the French Food Safety Agency in Referral 2008-SA-0091 concerning the management of tuberculosis and brucellosis in France.
