8. Main Content

The proposed Order amends the Specified Bovine Material (No.2) Order (Northern Ireland) 1996 (?the 1996 Order?) as follows:

Sale of pet food at feed mills:

Article 4 of the 1996 Order permits the production of material containing MBM (Principally pet food) on the same premises where animal feed is prepared, providing the two processes and equipment used are completely separated. However, the Order does not allow the sale of material containing MBM at premises where animal feed is produced. If this provision remains unchanged, any feed mills with shops on their premises will have to stop selling pet food from such shops.

It is therefore proposed to amend the 1996 Order to permit the sale of pet food from feed mills provided that, when stored and presented for sale, the pet food is physically separated from any animal feed or both materials are securely packaged to prevent any spillage or leakage. These safeguards will prevent any possibility of cross-contamination of the animal feed.

Record keeping requirements for fertilisers:

Since the 1996 Order came into effect, the industry has pointed out that MBM on its own rather than as an ingredient of another product, is sold for use as a fertiliser in domestic gardens. This is contrary to their previous advice.

The 1996 Order requires the keeping of records beyond the point of retail sale and a consumer buying MBM for their garden would have to keep, for two years, records of the transportation and end use of the material. This would clearly be an unreasonable burden.

It is therefore proposed to amend the 1996 Order so that the record keeping requirements for MBM packaged for retail sale and in bags or containers of 25kg or less is limited to manufacturers where the product goes directly to retailers and otherwise to wholesalers.

Confining the requirements in this way should still provide sufficient information to ensure that MBM is not being supplied to farmers or feed compounders, since it will still be traceable to the point of sale.

Definition of Mammalian Meat and Bone Meal (MBM):

Following further discussions with the industry, it is proposed that the definition of MBM be clarified to ensure that it covers all the products of rendering by referring directly to The standards contained in the Animal By-Products Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1993.

9. Brief Statement of Grounds

- a) To prevent loss of business for feed mills and pet food manufacturers:
- b) to remove the need for cumbersome record keeping when MBM is used as domestic garden fertiliser; and
- c) to ensure that the prohibitions and safeguards in the Specified Bovine Material (No.2) Order (Northern Ireland) 1996 apply to all the products of rendering.

11. Invocation of the Emergency Procedure

Yes

12. Grounds for the Emergency

This order is the latest in the series of measures which are intended to safeguard humans and animals from BSE. All previous measures were notified under the emergency procedure. In particular this order, as indicated in paragraph 8A, ensures that scope for possible cross - contamination of animal feed by mammalian meat and bone meal is reduced by ensuring that the definition of MBM covers all products by rendering, this must be done as quickly as possible.
