8. Main Content

When a fire breaks out in a workplace, the text aims to enable the deferred evacuation of disabled persons, provided these workplaces are equipped with secure areas in which the persons in question can assemble and wait, safely, for the assistance of emergency services.

The provisions of this decree intended to force compliance of main contractors (construction of new buildings or new parts of buildings) also marginally modify several provisions which are applicable to employers using the buildings in question, in terms of signalling, identification of secure waiting areas, and safety instructions given to employees.

Keywords: secure waiting areas, deferred evacuation

9. Brief Statement of Grounds

This project has been drawn up in the interests of better considering the accessibility of disabled persons in workplaces.

The existing provisions of the Labour Code in terms of the design of workplaces were limited to setting requirements for the rapid evacuation of all the occupants of workplaces. Whereas for disabled persons, it could be preferable to plan for a two-part deferred evacuation: in the first part, a horizontal move to secure waiting areas, protecting them from the effects of a fire (smoke, flames, heat rays and collapse of the building), in the second part, a vertical move ensured by emergency services or fire services.
