8. Main Content

a. to add a further option to the current list of british standards to which child restraints, provided in motor vehicles, are required to be approved. approvals to un ece regulation no 44 will remain an option and provision for child restraints approved to relevant national standards or technical specifications of another member state will be permitted provided they offer equivalent guarantees of safety, suitability and fitness for purpose, and bear the markings applied by the manufacturers indicating compliance with the requirements of the relevant standard or technical specification.

member states in which standards or technical specifications, that guarantee such equivalent levels of safety, are in force are invited to inform us if they wish their standards to be recognised.

b. the united kingdom would like to be informed by other member states of their own standards or regulations offering an equivalent level of safety and security.

9. Brief Statement of Grounds the uk wish to amend their national requirements so as not to prevent the use of child restraints which incorporate the latest developments in child safety protection in the event of an accident.
