8. Main Content

An electronic time stamping process means any mechanism associating a representation of data with a specific time and vouching for the existence of this data at that moment. In particular, it can be used to affix a courier dispatch or receipt date or to vouch for the date of an action performed through electronic means.

In order to create user confidence in the corresponding products and services, this draft Decree defines procedures for accreditation of assessment bodies and qualification of electronic time stamping service providers. The procedures in question are optional.

9. Brief Statement of Grounds

Dematerialisation is one of the key issues for today's society. It is supposed to provide the users of these techniques with a certain level of confidence and security. Within this context, this draft Order aims to define the conditions for optional recognition of the qualification of electronic time stamping service providers.
