8. Main Content

This document is a supplement to the gaming machine standards previously notified (2007/0285/UK) which are currently in force. It includes revisions to the Critical Memory, RNG, Initiating the Next Game, Live Jackpot, Additional Credit(s), Game Links, Display Notice Requirements, and Definitions sections of certain standards. The Standards vary according to the category of gaming machine (as defined in The Categories of Gaming Machine Regulations - see notification 2006/0565/UK), and the manner in which the machine operates and makes allowances for machines currently in the market.

The Gambling Act 2005 gives the Gambling Commission ("the Commission"), the responsibility to license operators that manufacture, supply, install, adapt, maintain or repair gaming machines in Great Britain. It is a condition of such gaming machine technical licences that the operator complies with the Commission's Gaming Machine Technical Standards. The Standards in force set out in detail the technical requirements relating to gaming machines and cover:

- Hardware requirements (including security and identification of the machine);
- Software requirements and Critical memory requirements;
- Machine credit and payment requirements;
- Game requirements (including the means of determining the outcome of a game, game cycle speed and game features);
- Metering, error and alert requirements; and
- Display requirements.

9. Brief Statement of Grounds

This document is needed to ensure the standards are up to date and accurate. The amendments correct minor errors and minor inconsistencies between the different standards.
