The ordinance establishes a right for users to notify administrations by electronic means and defines the conditions under which users and administrations may, in the context of their correspondence, send registered letters via electronic mail. This text additionally sets out the conditions under which a document may be issued by an administration in digital format and be accepted as having the same value as a document in paper form.

9. Brief Statement of Grounds

Article 2 of Law No 2013-1005 of 12 November 2013 enabling the government to simplify relations between administrative authorities and citizens authorised the government, within the twelve months following promulgation of this law, to issue legislative provisions by ordinance intended to:

1° Define the conditions under which the right may be exercised to notify administrative authorities by electronic means and reply to them by the same means;

2° Define the conditions, in particular the guarantees of security and proof, under which users may, in the context of their correspondence with administrative authorities, send registered letters via electronic mail which have the value of registered letters where this formality is required by a legislative or regulatory text, and the conditions under which administrative authorities may use the same procedure with users who have given their prior consent to this arrangement.

The joint draft Ordinance, which amends Ordinance no. 2005-1516 of 8 December 2005 on electronic interactions between public services users and administrative authorities and between the administrative authorities, is issued on the basis of this authorisation.
