5. Title

The Salmon Carcass Tagging (Scotland) Regulations 2016

6. Products Concerned

Salmon caught in Scotland and the tags to be affixed to the salmon. The salmon carcasses must be tagged before or on landing the fish.

7. Notification Under Another Act

- Directive 2000/13/EC on the labelling and presentation and advertising of foodstuffs

8. Main Content

The regulations place a requirement for salmon carcasses, where the fish are taken in Scotland, to be tagged with a salmon tag before, or on, landing the fish. Salmon tags will be issued by the Scottish Ministers. The regulations specify that the tag must have a cable tie and lock and be capable of fitting through the mouth of the salmon to emerge from the gill opening and be secured using the cable tie and lock. The salmon tag must also contain a unique reference number and the name of the salmon fishery within which the salmon was taken. The tag may only be removed where the fish is prepared for cooking or smoking or is cut immediately prior to its being sold or when prepared for personal consumption.

9. Brief Statement of Grounds

The Scottish Government is committed to the enhanced regulation of fisheries management and conservation in Scotland. The regulations will create a unique numbered tagging scheme for Scotland. The tagging regime is designed to provide enhanced traceability for salmon which finds its way on to the market. That will support the more effective enforcement of the current management framework of freshwater fisheries. The intention is that these measures will supplement existing conservation measures and allow statistics recorded with the new tagging system to be used to calculate sustainable fisheries stocks. The tagging system will provide assurances to purchasers of the authenticity of the product and will provide added protection to those operating legitimately in the commercial market.
