5. Title

The Online Infringement of Copyright (Initial Obligations)(Sharing of Costs) Order 2011

6. Products Concerned

The Statutory Instrument sets out how a process to address online infringement of copyright is to be funded. The process itself will impact on the service provided by Internet service providers to their subscribers if they are identified by copyright owners as infringing their copyright, and require the Internet service providers to send notifications to such subscribers and, if they are identified multiple times, include them on a list of infringers. No personal information will be exchanged at any time without a court order. An appeals process will be set up, and the costs of that and other central costs incurred by the regulator will need to be assigned to the industry participants and recovered along with the cost of the notifications themselves. It is the proportion of costs borne by copyright owners and Internet service providers which the Statutory Instrument sets out

7. Notification Under Another Act

8. Main Content

The Order specifies provisions that must be included in the initial obligations code about payment by copyright owners and internet service providers of contributions towards costs incurred under the copyright infringement provisions in the Communications Act 2003 inserted by the Digital Economy Act 2010.

9. Brief Statement of Grounds

The Order reflects the decision of the Government that the costs associated with the operation of the initial obligations under the online infringement of copyright provisions should be borne 75% by copyright owners and 25% by internet service providers.
