8. Main Content

The National Table of Frequency Allocations is based on the General Law No 32 of 3 November 2003 on Telecommunications, which, in article 43 thereto, lays down that the management of the public radio domain and the faculties for its administration and control are the responsibility of the State, and, in Article 44 thereto, lays down that the Government shall be responsible for implementing procedures for the drafting of plans for the use of the radio spectrum for the various types of telecommunications services. In accordance with applicable standards in the European Union and the resolutions and recommendations of the International Telecommunications Union, the CNAF lays down the attribution of radio bands and corresponding sub-bands, channels and circuits, in addition to other technical characteristics which may be necessary.
