8. Main Content

This draft contains:

a Royal Decree, consisting of a preamble explaining the scope and purpose thereof, one single article approving the supplementary technical instruction (hereinafter: STI) MP-IP-04 'Supply installations for vehicles', five additional provisions, five transitory provisions, one repealing provision and four final provisions.

The aim of STI MI-IP-04 is to lay down technical specifications with which installations for supplying vehicles with fuel must comply. It contains 16 chapters which lay down the conditions for installations (tanks, pipes, pumps, leak detection systems, electrical installations, fire protection measures), requirements which must be met for those installations which are temporary, left unattended and which supply biofuels, as well as the checks, tests and periodic inspections of these installations.

9. Brief Statement of Grounds

The draft aims to improve safety legislation for supply installations for vehicles by taking into account:

- the advancements in technology that have taken place within this field in recent years.
- the risks as a result of new fuels, i.e. biodiesel and bioethanol.
- the risks of unattended installations.
- measures are laid down for existing installations in order to reduce the risk of contamination due to fuel leaks in tanks and pipes.
