8. Main Content

As part of the plan to relaunch construction and the new approach to regulation and technical standardisation, three notified draft regulatory texts separate the part concerning electrical safety in residential buildings from that concerning communication networks in dwellings (currently confused in the Order of 22 October 1969).

The draft implementation Order for the draft Decree amending Article R.111-14 of the French Construction and Housing Code clarifies the requirement for an internal (wired) communication installation in order to take into account the various services (telephone, television and Internet), defines the number of communication sockets per room according to the type of dwelling and updates the list of 'densely populated' communities requiring four fibres per building.

9. Brief Statement of Grounds

This draft Order is part of a body of three regulatory texts that form part of the French government's general drive to relaunch housing construction. These texts clarify the requirements and reduce the cost of communication installations in dwellings, while ensuring a better level of service (streamlining construction costs).
